Kerens Voters Eye Railroad Proposal

By KIT BAUMAN
Staff Writer

KERENS—Voters will be going to the polls here Saturday in a city referendum to pass on an offer from the Cotton Belt Route railroad that would close five of the town's streets over the railroad in return for $60,000 worth of safety gates at the remaining three crossings.

Car-train accidents have, over the years, claimed 15 lives within the town which is bisected east to west by the railroad. A number of near-fatal accidents as well—the most recent one some three weeks ago—will make Saturday's issue an emotional one to the community, but opposition to the proposal has arisen as the election day has drawn near.

Advertisements urging the townpeople to reject the railroad's proposal have appeared in the Kerens Tribune, along with supporting letters from residents. Petitions have circulated through the community, said one resident Thursday, asking that the city council withdraw the proposal from public consideration.

Tillman Reed, a local realtor and a leader of those opposed to the offer, said Thursday that the closing of the five crossings would cut off avenues of access to the school from the north part of town where much of the recent homebuilding has been going on. With only three access streets to the downtown section from Highway 31, the result would be traffic congestion that "isn't going to promote safety," he added.

A second factor in the opposition's argument is a clause included in the railroad's offer which states that with the acceptance of the offer the city would no longer attempt to regulate the speed with which trains move through the community. Speed limits along the railroad have been a constant source of conflict between the town and the railroad for years and opponents of the railroad's offer say that the city would lose its inherent right to regulate within its own city limits.

Some residents here say that it was the death in March of this year of 77-year-old Clifton Seale, who was born deaf, that has led to this Saturday's referendum. Seale, a longtime resident of the community, was returning from Corsicana to his home when his car was struck by a west-bound train, killing him instantly.

Postmaster B. T. Berry and several other residents of the community began to advertise on the need for safety devices at the crossings. City officials met with the railroad this summer and returned from that meeting with the proposal that will go before the voters Saturday.

An open meeting of the city council, the community successfully pushed for the referendum on the offer.

The city's only contribution to the proposal as stated would be its closure of five of the eight crossings. The city might re-open one or more of the crossings at a later date, said Berry, paying for the safety gates out of the city funds.

At the moment, however, the only cash outlay would be the estimated $60,000 the railroad would put up for the three safety gates.

Dawson Man Dies After Being Hit by Vehicle

A Dawson resident, E.L. Chambers, 62, was dead on arrival at a Waco hospital Wednesday where he was rushed with multiple injuries after he was struck by a pickup truck near Dawson Wednesday about 10:30 a.m. Investigating officers said the driver, Lloyd Wardene Teakell, 59, also of Dawson, who had a heart condition, subsequently was admitted to Memorial Hospital.

Chambers first was brought by ambulance to Memorial Hospital where he was treated in emergency and transferred with serious head injuries to Waco where he was pronounced dead on arrival at Hillcrest Hospital about 12:55 p.m.

Investigating Highway Patrolmen Bob Parrish and Al Fisher said their probe of the mishap indicated that Chambers walked into the path of Teakell's truck, crossing Farm Road 709 from the north to the south, as Teakell was travelling east away from Dawson. He apparently never saw the approaching vehicle.

Chambers was reported by friends to have been gathering pecans from several large trees 1.3 miles east of Dawson near the Battle Creek area.

Investigating officers said the impact threw him up over the truck's hood with his head striking the windshield right in front of Teakell.

Officers were unable to talk extensively with Teakell as he was "so shaken up by the accident and had to take medication for his heart ailment," Parrish said.

Chambers was employed by the Mexia State School and was a retired farmer who had lived in the Dawson area 35 years. He was a member of the Dawson Baptist Church.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Friday at the Dawson Baptist Church with the Rev. Bill Klingsmith and the Rev. R. J. Miller officiating. Burial will be in the Dawson Cemetery under the direction of Eubanks Funeral Home.

He is survived by his widow, Tressie Chambers, Dawson; two daughters, Mrs. Billy Tickle of Killeen and Mrs. Dan I. Adams of Duncanville; two sons, Charles A. Chambers of Dallas and Lovall C. Chambers of Duncanville; 6 grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. W.W. Wright of Washington state; and two brothers, Aubrey Chambers of Italy and Cecil Chambers of Lampassas.

Firemen Injured In Wreck

Two Corsicana firemen were injured with one admitted to the hospital Wednesday after their small pickup size fire truck overturned in loose gravel on the Chandler road 1.4 miles west of Eureka off S. Hwy. 287 at 11:45 a.m.

Admitted was the truck's driver, Morgan Blair, 903 E. Collin St., with multiple lacerations of the face, hands and arms and back pains. Released after treatment was Rod A. Adams, 211 N. 3rd St., who complained of pains of the left wrist and right hip area.

Investigating Highway Patrolman Bob Parish said the firemen were on a barn fire call in the area and were en route to a water supply source to replenish their truck's water tank when Blair lost control in loose gravel and overturned. The 1956 Chevrolet pickup fire truck was a total loss.

fast session at the Holiday Inn today and discussed problems and programs affecting both governmental bodies.

City Commissioner P. D. Fullwood said the breakfast meeting was his idea. The "informal discussions", he said, would improve communication and help the city and county officials "iron out" problems they have in common.

The question of how much should the county government contribute toward operation of the City of Corsicana Fire Department was one of the issues discussed by the officials. Present at the meeting were Navarro County Judge Kenneth Douglas and county commissioners Homer E. McNabb, Arlon G. Simmons, Edwin E. Montgomery and Billy E. Hargrove. City officials included Mayor Sue Youngblood, City Manager Bob Brockman, and city commissioners Fulwood, Bob Scott, and John Carlock. Two representatives from the Daily Sun and one from the local radio station were also present.

Fullwood began discussion after breakfast by mentioning that the development of subdivisions out in the county is an overlapping problem.

"It's a thing we may all need to work together on," he said.

He linked this expansion with the fire department's work by noting that eventually there will be so many areas outside the city that the department may have to broaden its equipment and possibly build a substation to provide adequate fire protection. The problem, he added, is where the money would come from to pay for this service and equipment.

Carlock asked the county officials what they could do, other than paying the $400 per year they now pay, toward helping finance operation of the city fire department.

Hargrove pointed out that many people with property outside the City of Corsicana actually live within the city limits and pay city taxes also.

"But a lot of them don't", replied Carlock.

The city manager said a 3-year average record shows 24 per cent of the fires which the department is called upon to fight are outside the city limits. The average, he said, is about 150 per year outside the city and 450 per year inside the city limits.

Carlock said he hated to see the fire department problem "crop up its ugly head all the time" but it was a present problem and he felt the services provided by the city fire department were worth more than $400 per year.

Fullwood pointed out that the fire chief and at least four men answer the fire calls. He suggested that in many cases possibly the landowner himself would not hesitate a minute to pay a $25 fee for help by the department in extinguishing a fire.

Douglas pointed out that the county might be willing to pay the "out of pocket" expense for costs over and above the cost of operating expenses of the fire department."

The County Judge also mentioned that "it's just by custom and usage that the county has some areas of responsibility and the city has other areas of responsibility."

When it was pointed out that the local hospital was operated by the county, Carlock said people in the city pay county taxes, too, and help pay for operation of the county hospital.

Douglas mentioned during discussion that the county purchases most of its building materials within the City of Corsicana and contributes to the revenue here.

Two other topics which received some exploratory discussion were the county's financial contribution toward operation of the Corsicana public library since this facility is used by county residents; and the subject of Corsicana working out an agreement for the city to utilize the county jail and abandoning operation of a city jail. Both matters are likely topics for future discussions between the two governing bodies.

Other discussion at the breakfast session included the question of what county matters are discussed outside of official county commission meetings.

Douglas commented that the county commissioners individually drop by his office, generally two or three days each week and discuss anything that may come up in the way of county business. He said county commissioners are fulltime employees while city commissioners are part-time officials.

Mayor Youngblood asked, "Well how do you get around the closed meeting law?"

Douglas said the matters are simply discussed but that no official action is taken on them. When action is to be taken, he said, the commission "invites" the news media to attend. He said they do not refrain from discussing county matters simply because members of the news media are not present.

As the meeting was drawing to a close, Fullwood said, "There's no reason why the commissioners of both city and county can't work together."

"I just wanted the news media to feel free to be here because we were just having a discussion. Let's have more of that,"

Commissioners from both city and county governments voiced approval of these discussion sessions and a couple of members suggested holding these sessions on a monthly basis.

Food, Fiber Week Plans Under Way

By SAM PENDERGRAST
Editor of The Sun

A score of Navarro County farmers, ranchers, Extension Service personnel, businessmen and private citizens got together in the County Courtroom to plan Navarro County's observance of "Texas Food and Fiber Week" Nov. 15-21.

County Judge Kenneth (Buck) Douglas, appointed chairman of the area observance by State Chairman Charles Scruggs of Abilene, presided.

Members of the committee will be fanning out throughout the county the remainder of this week and next to get projects under way and completed in time for the week's observance marking the $8 billion annual yield of Texas products in the area of food and fiber.

Major project suggested was a central display of agricultural equipment and products native to our area, which was to be arranged in the mall at Navarro Mall Shopping Center (subject to availability of the space there) by a committee made up of James Fortson, Will Jones, Lee Tunell, Elmer Porter and Morris Kirby.

Raymond Hampel, Jr., Charles Hooser and Mrs. Tressie Langston are on a committee in charge of coordinating such school observances as visits to the major agricultural display and other projects.

Carroll Boswell, Lynn Sanders and this newsman will be in charge of seeking assistance of local school art departments in producing posters dramatizing the week for display in the nine banks, post offices and other public locations throughout the county.

Mrs. Fannie Mae Vernon, L. O. McReynolds, and Tom Hooser are leaders of a committee that will seek cooperation of local products, with particular emphasis on locally produced foods and other items.

Mrs. Vernon said she and others will contact as many grocery store owners and managers as possible, but she asked that all grocers cooperate by setting up some kind of Texas product display.

Lynn Sanders and Drew Gillen will be in contact with the Ministerial Alliance and area ministers suggesting appropriate sermons on our state's abundant agricultural production, and, again, all ministers have been urged to comment on the week in whatever way they think appropriate.

Any local and area service clubs will be contacted by Charles Hooser, Carroll Boswell, Gene Sears, Robert Bruner, Gillen, and others seeking to line up programs for the week of Nov. 15-21 dramatizing Texas products—with at least some brief observance, even if the clubs' programs have already been committed for other subjects.

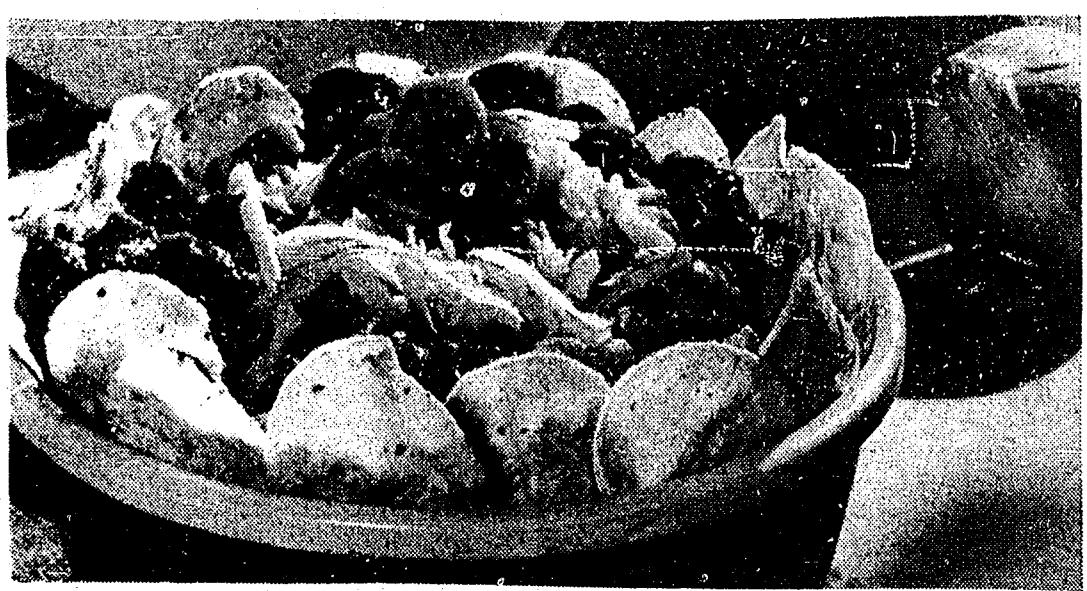

Demolished Firetruck

This 1956 Chevrolet "grass" fire truck of Corsicana Fire Department was totally demolished when it overturned in loose gravel injuring two city firefighters answering a barn fire near Eureka. Driver Morgan Blair was admitted to Memorial Hospital. Rod Adams was dismissed after treatment in emergency. The wrecked fire truck was towed to the Corsicana City Barn where this photo was made by Sun Staffer Rob Mecke.

Mashing Helps Carrot Flavor

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Carrots have come a long way since they were used with their leaves to decorate the hair of English women. Carrots are good raw and a favorite of dieters. Try a change of pace dish by mashing carrots. Mashing enhances the natural flavor and carrots cooked without peeling in a minimum amount of water for the shortest possible time preserves nutrients.

MASHED CARROTS
1 pound carrots (about 6 medium)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup water
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
Dash freshly ground pepper

Scrub carrots, do not scrape. Trim off ends. Cut into ¼ inch slices. Melt butter in a saucepan. Add onion and celery and cook until vegetable is soft. Add water, salt, rosemary and carrots. Cover tightly, reduce heat to medium and cook 18 to 20 minutes or until carrots are tender and water has cooked away, stirring occasionally during cooking. Turn carrot mixture into warmed food mill placed over a warm bowl. Strain carrot through food mill. Serve immediately, topped with a pat of butter. Makes about 2 cups or 4 to 6 servings.

For Mashed Carrot Timbales: Spoon mashed carrots into 4 small buttered custard cups, dot tops with butter. Place in a 350-degree oven 10 minutes. Run a small knife around edge of mold and unmold on rounds of buttered toast. If needed, reshape with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

Seismologists generally agree that at present there is no means of reliability predicting an earthquake anywhere.

These are great days for extremes in food habits. We have the organic food enthusiasts, determined not to eat anything overprocessed or fertilized by anything other than manure or compost. We have the vitamin enthusiasts, who claim that all ills can be cured by taking the proper vitamin every day. Also we have the slenderness-at-a-nay-cost group who are wittingly or unwittingly starving their bodies of essential foods in order to lose a few pounds every week.

"All of these ideas have some sanity. But not enough to justify diets that are dangerous. So until scientists can find the exact effect of processing on food's value, the effect of chemical fertilizers, the exact function of vitamins and the importance of diet on over-all health, why not resolve to stick to a balanced diet?" asks Marcia Katz, director of Nutrition for the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York. The Plan has 800,000 members and employs 1,200 doctors. Miss Katz is a Master of Nutrition from University of Wisconsin and has for years worked with leading nutritionists and doctors.

"A balanced or adequate diet means simply one in which there are adequate amounts of grains, meat, fish, milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. But we must select these foods from the 10,000 or more items in our supermarkets. So how about a little more reading of labels," she says, adding:

"Vitamins are essential to life, health, growth and vigor. Advertising has made vitamins a household word synonymous with health, vitality, 'vigor,' etc."

"Take all the vitamin pills or capsules you want. But you cannot attain physical health without enough proteins, minerals, fats and carbohydrates as well. Vitamins cannot be considered a substitute for any of the other nutrients. Or for each other. Each vitamin does its own unique work, remember," she states.

In the Public Affairs Pamphlet just published (No. 465, price 25 cents) entitled "Vitamins, Food and Your Health," she has this to say about organic foods:

"As an alternative to mass-produced, overprocessed supermarket food, some people are turning to 'naturally' grown foods. But there is no adequate scientific evidence that fruits and vegetables grown in soils fertilized with organic fertilizers are any more nutritious than those grown in chemically fertilized soils. Organically grown foods may be tastier. But their vitamin content is neither more nor less than those of the cheaper, mass-produced fruits and vegetables."

Four generations of the descendants of the late Frank and Ellen Reese Sheets and Will Sheets and his widow, Nell Sheets of Chatfield held their third annual all-day family reunion Sunday at Chatfield Community Center with 50 relatives present.

In 1878 Frank Sheets married Elizabeth Ann Reese whose ancestors have been traced back to the first century. In 1924 Mary Reese Walters began the writing of a book of the history and genealogy of the Reese family which was published in the early thirties, and from research bureau in Washington, D.C. She found information that enabled her to trace the lineage of the family back to its origin in Wales in 876 AD. Included in the ancestors are a Chief Justice of Wales, Prince Cadell Mawr, Rhys Mechyl, Lord of Llan-dover Castle, and other titans.

If you failed to turn your clock relatives. back an hour last night it may not be as late as you think!

We return to standard time today and again I'll go on record to say I don't like it. Wish they'd make up their mind and keep it the same all year round.

They sorta good naturally "threatened" me last spring in Bain's Hardware and Implement (Kerens) because I said I didn't like Day Light Saving Time. I told them it wasn't exactly the same as Daylight Saving Time. I was at the age where my BONES told me what time it was anyway. I'm so old it takes me longer to get rested than it does to get tired. Several members of the 4-H Club and their parents attended the annual Achievement Banquet in Corsicana on Tuesday night.

He said, "Go over to your brother's (Tom Hester) house and get you a mess of trout. Esther went to the coast and caught a couple barrels full.

I went over to their house but no one was home. Tom was at the gin 'gunning up a storm.'

I then called Esther's sister, Minnie Parker, and she said that she and Esther were fixing to go pick up pecans.

Tom had written me a letter saying that Esther had been to La Porte to visit their daughter, Queva Faye, and her husband, Guy. Had bought a new boat and they all went fishing. They caught 135 speckled trout ranging in size from one pound to four and one-half pounds. They ran out of shrimp or would have caught more. Esther said that she wanted to go back the next day but the YOUNG ONES were too tired. Smile.

Congratulations! Wish I had been with you.

Personal to Ruth Lawrence of Dawson: Thanks for the nice letter and poem. I used the poem in a previous column. Guess you missed it. Do write again.

Drew Gillen and Robert Gladney were plant visitors last week. They both had kind words to say about The Daily Sun. Thanks, and do drop in again.

Funny thing happened to me while I was standing on a corner waiting for the red light to turn green. A lady in a white uniform walked up to me and PULLED MY HAIR.

She said, "I just wanted to see if you were wearing a Wig, your hair always looks the same."

I was so FLABBERGASTED I just stood there speechless. She went on her merry way without saying another word.

Can you figure that one out, James Hunt? My head HURTS!

Don't let the ghosts or goblins getcha tonight. Do watch out for the small fry who are out trick or treatin'.

Hope you enjoy our special Cattle and Agricultural Tab in today's paper.

Youth Appreciation Week Observance Urged by Rev. Smart

By ROB MECKEL
Staff Writer

Smart then asked club members to support the TARS in their Walk-A-Thon Saturday to raise money for the Child Development Center in Corsicana. He said they could do this by contributing "so much a mile" for one of the volunteer walkers.

"The purpose of Youth Appreciation Week," he said, "is to recognize our young people who went unrecognized in other ways. We have a lot of young people who are hard-working upstanding citizens willing to carry the load."

Smart said this year trophies will be presented to the two top youths nominated by the community. Last year the trophies went to Bruce Mertz and Jane Wilson. He added that a banquet will be held the night of Nov. 22 at the Holiday Inn in honor of the two youths.

Selection of the two top youths, Smart said, is from nominations submitted by organizations or individuals in the community. The youths must be from middle high school to junior college age to be considered.

Smart introduced two volunteers from the local TARS (Teen's Aid the Retarded) organization, Debbie Lockhart and Denise Smart. He said TARS is chartered under the Navarro County Association for Retarded Children. Purpose of TARS, he added, is for these teenagers to sponsor various meaningful activities for retarded children.

Cerebral Palsy Drive Getting Good Response

Workers in the first organized Cerebral Palsy fund drive canvassing Corsicana throughout this week are receiving surprisingly good response.

Since this is a first undertaking, and with no specific goal set, workers numbering more than 150 began Monday seeking donations with expectations it would be an uphill battle until there has been more public recognition and acceptance.

"We were surprised at how responsive and how generous people were on the first two evenings, Monday and Tuesday," related Mrs. James Chapman III, co-chairman with Mrs. Richard Lancaster and Mrs. T. D. Taylor.

"What has been even more surprising is that the kids, the small youngsters, are contributing their nickels and dimes. It has been most encouraging and we are all grateful," Mrs. Chapman said.

Campaign solicitors are distributing informative leaflets wherever they call on neighbors designed to give citizens a better understanding and new awareness of what can be done to help the CP victim toward rehabilitation of a meaningful place in society.

Coin receipts has been placed in most Corsicana business firms before the doorbell ringing campaign began.

While the actual canvassing of residential neighborhoods is being waged by an army of mothers and housewives, a group of business men have assumed the responsibility of seeking donations in the business community. This group includes Don Bowen, Darrell Johnson, Neal Crawford, Charles Hooser and Dr. Phillip Awtry, most of whom are members of the Cerebral Palsy chapter executive committee.

Block workers who will be striving to make a complete canvass throughout this week of every residential street in town include the following:

Kiwanis Chili Supper Scheduled Saturday

The Corsicana Kiwanis Club will sponsor a chili supper Saturday, Nov. 6, from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Collins Middle School Cafeteria. Tickets, at $1 each, promise "all the chili you can eat" and drinks furnished.

Plans for the benefit were made at the service club's Monday luncheon meeting held in Martin Hall at First United Methodist Church.

The program for the day was presented by Kiwanian Julius Jacobs, who shared, through color slides and commentary, highlights of his recent visit to Israel.

Jacobs described Israel as a small country about the size of the state of New Jersey and called it a land of contrasts of old and new, a point he illustrated by showing pictures of a city only 23 years old and another 9,000 years old.

He pointed out the fact that the young are active in the country, as evidenced immediately by the loud music aboard the plane in

Local Educators Study Directions

Three officers of the Corsicana Classroom Teachers Association, Mrs. Ina Jones, Miss Colleen Daggett and Mrs. Marianne Anderson, were in Fort Worth Oct. 24-26 to attend the Texas Conference on Teacher Education sponsored by the Texas Education Agency at the Sheraton-Fort Worth Hotel.

The theme of the conference was "New Directions in Teacher Education", and its main focus was on standards for teacher certification and standards for preparation of school administrators. Mrs. Anderson, as president of the local unit, attended a Presidents Conference of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association on Oct. 23, just prior to the TEA meeting, which was attended by more than 1,000 teachers, school administrators and education professors from over the state.

Norman Hall, superintendent of the Andrews Independent School District, was chairman of the TEA conference. Vice-chairman was Jewel H. Hancock, professor of education at Texas College. Mrs. Ruth Amend of Fort Worth will be guest speaker at the next meeting of the Corsicana Classroom Teachers Association to be held Nov. 16.

Israel. He demonstrated interesting points about the Hebrew language and observed that of the three million people in Israel, 400,000 are Arabs, adding that the Arab segment of the population now appears to be doing well and fitting into the economy of the country.

Israeli boys spend three years in the army, while girls receive military training for two months after graduation from high school and thereafter are given periodic training.

Tel Aviv, Haifa and Joppa were among the places visited by Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs on their recent trip. Jacobs observed that the Bible comes to life as one visits such places as Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Capernaum Cesarea, and the Sea of Galilee.

In Jerusalem, the Jacobs' visited the Dome of the Rock, the Wailing Wall, the Garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives. The tomb of Rachael and the tomb of the Patriarchs were also points of historic interest included in the color slides.

Mrs. Brown, Mother of Five, Earns High School Diploma

By NELL FISCHER
Staff Writer

"Oh, I don't have time to go back to school, not with a houseful of kids to feed and take care of," is the typical reaction of many mothers who do not have a high school diploma.

But Mrs. Mattie Brown, who has four school-age children and one pre-school child, decided she wanted to get a high school diploma.

She did just that by entering the adult basic education program offered by Corsicana Public Schools. In fact, she is the first graduate of the program at the courses held at Southpark Garden Apartments.

"I got as far as the ninth grade at Jackson." Mrs. Brown relates, "but didn't get to enter because I had to help my mother."

Since then, she has married and begun her own family.

But that did not keep her from attending classes at the apartments. "I didn't get to study much after the kids were home from school," she laughed, "so I studied when they were in school."

"Math was the hardest but also the most interesting. I never had much math."

Mrs. Brown began in June and, after five months, has learned enough to earn a high school equivalency diploma, which will now go in a permanent file at the high school, as do all records of high school graduates in the district.

With the diploma, Mrs. Brown is still not totally satisfied. She is finishing material must fulfill a variety of requirements. The surface must be resistant to excessive moisture, heat, cold, alkalies, acids and medicines.

Strong impacts, excessive cutting and chopping, various abrasives and sunlight require a versatile counter top. The material should be reasonably priced and easy to install.

Color and pattern are important considerations. Color reflecting light without creating glare and having little color contrast from the surrounding surfaces is less likely to cause visual fatigue. Plain color will provide a more relaxed atmosphere than repetition or addition of patterns in a room. Unemphatic texture or design has proven easy on the eyes and shows less wear.

There is no material on the market which meets all the required qualifications, but many are satisfactory if proper use and care are given.

When a material is made in both squares or sheets, the latter is preferred since there are fewer joints required.

COUNTER PARTS AND REQUIREMENTS: Backing is needed on materials which are not self-supporting. Exterior grade $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch plywood or $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch water-repellent particle board usually is used. A water-repellent backing is required.

Joints are not desirable on counter surfaces, but when the counter requires joining, the butt joint between the two sheets should be tight so no food and moisture can creep into crevices. Avoid joining with divider strips as they make cleaning difficult.

Backsplashes keep the wall behind the counter clean. Concave-shaped backsplashes are better than those joined by metal striping. Flexible materials excellent for concave backsplashes would be linoleum, vinyl and some polyester laminates. For ease of cleaning, backsplashes should extend to the base of the wall cupboard, rather than ending 4 or 5 inches up the wall.

FLOOR-5TH WALL IN YOUR DECORATING PLAN

At last, floors are recognized for their great design possibilities in creating individuality in decorating plans.

Look-alike, unmemorable floors are fast losing popularity.

Great floor designs that come across like one-of-a-kind paintings are becoming important.

Give floors that one-of-a-kind quality by working with vinyl and stone shapes in new ways. For example, colors and basic shapes of an Indian-themed wallpaper can be exploded into a pow-wow patchwork of a dazzling floor by using custom cut vinyl tiles fitted to zigzag across the family room.

Or do you have a favorite quilt, fabric or painting design? Then repeat the design on your floor.

For practical flooring, consider ceramic tiles. They're easy to lay and ever-handsome, even if a bit of city grime or country dirt gets tracked on them.

But if it's simplicity or a return to the past you have in mind, use a serene polished sweep of Italian marble. Bare can be beautiful.

You may even use tiling as you would an area rug. Border the "tile rug" in a lively design with a contrasting solid color, or cut and inset colored geometric shapes such as triangles and squares. If you don't want straight lines, make stylized flowers or choose a sheet vinyl that's embossed with a flowing curvy design. Perhaps you could even have your family crest embroidered on the floor.

Great looks for floors have no limit. Just think of the floor as more than a place to walk. Make it the "fifth wall" in your decorating plan.
